SUMMARY

1. Conduct regular Toolbox Safety Talks: Daily, Weekly, Bi-Weekly or at least Monthly.
2. Report Near Misses and Boo-Boo's (properly called "First Aid Injuries").
3. Actually Have a written Safety Policy, Clearly Communicate it and Equally Enforce it.
4. Safety 24/7: At Work, At Home and On the Road.
5. Inspect before each use.
6. Learn how OSHA thinks: Use According to Manufacturer's Recommendations. (Use per its design.)
7. Don't have Overconfidence in your PPE (because it's the last resort)!
8. R.E.S.P.E.C.T. Treat others as you'd like to be treated. Show others you care. This improves production, quality & safety because people will feel and truly be more supported & loyal, this increases teamwork because it increases willingness to look out for each other & receive advice.

*These 8 Best Practices are simply a list Steve has compiled from the past 10 years of training in over 30 states (and in Mexico) and observing what companies across different industries are doing when they have to get serious about safety & health because someone died or got seriously injured. Steve has noticed that these companies (small and large) are all applying the same "fundamentals" of safety. We all know that "fundamentals" win championships; so put these into practice and win with safety & health!
